

Life After Facebook? 60 Million MyLife Members Can't Be Wrong!

Most people these days can't imagine life without social media. In our ever changing, fast paced, global society staying connected has never been more important than right now and MyLife is a company that is making that connection more convenient for the masses.

Research shows that almost all Facebook and other social media platform users log on using an external email service and that 40% of those who do use social media also use other platforms like Twitter, LinkedIn and Myspace. With a growing number of choices available, each with their own unique user interfaces and features, MyLife provides its members with a convenient way to stay connected.

"As social media use continues to rise, managing all of the separate connections can be daunting," states Jeff Tinsley, founder and CEO, MyLife. Daunting indeed, most social media users have between 2-5 accounts and keeping up with connections across that many platforms can be challenging. Add in the fact that many people have multiple email addresses for work and personal needs and the growing trend for employers to research potential employees on the web and the need to consolidate all that information is painfully apparent.

However, managing your online presence doesn't have to be painful or time consuming. In fact, MyLife actually makes it fun. With a sleek and easy to use bright green user interface, members can manage emails, social media profiles and find new connections at the push of a button.

MyLife offers a unique service that doesn't compete with other social media platforms. Instead, they strive to provide value to their customers by enhancing their experience. Providing services like People Finder, where members can find friends, family and even class mates and co-workers using a database spanning over 1 billion global profiles, is one of the many ways MyLife serves its members.

Users also have the ability to not only manage their interactions across all of the major social media platforms from one convenient place, but can also manage their online presence as well. Profile Remover is a unique tool offered by MyLife that empowers its members by allowing them to see and remove any online profiles they have created.

With over 60 million members and 1 million full fledged subscribers, MyLife is the only online platform that provides its members with access to over 1 billion global profiles all in one place. Finding the people that matter just got a whole lot easier. To find someone that matters to you, check out MyLife at <http://mylife.com>.
